

TraderSimon's 14 Key Setups

Supply Zone

Supply Continuation

Demand Zone

Demand Continuation

Bull Trap
(Aggressive entry)

Bull Trap
(Conservative entry)

Bear Trap
(Aggressive entry)

Bear Trap
(Conservative entry)

Continuation Bull Trap
(Aggressive entry)

Continuation Bull Trap
(Conservative entry)

Continuation Bear Trap
(Aggressive entry)

Continuation Bear Trap
(Conservative entry)

Engulfed Demand

Engulfed Supply

Hint Sheet

- The first “fresh” test of a zone is the most reliable.
- The more a zone is tested, the less likely it is to hold.
- The safest way to trade a 2nd test of a zone is with a conservative bull or bear trap.

Observe how the market approaches a zone

- Rounded retrace or flagging retrace = high probability
- V-shaped reversal = low probability

And finally...

- Always look at the higher timeframes.
- Which higher timeframe zones has the market come from? Which zones could it go to?
- Mark areas of equal (clean) highs and lows on your charts where stops could reside and the market could hunt later.
- Keep an eye on important upcoming news events that the market may be waiting on.